About the Role

- Develop and manage the early development of financial estimates and identify data gaps and areas of financial uncertainty for all Novartis pipeline products.
- Work with the broader HE team to lead the development of Financial Estimates included in PBAC submissions in collaboration with Strategic Planning and Brand/DPT teams.
- To assist in the preparation of additional related reimbursement applications (eg hospital and private health insurance formularies) as the need arises.
- Provide input for pricing strategy for all products across the product lifecycle.
- Provide submissions to global Pricing and Market Access to support business case in collaboration with the Integrated Brand team and marketing as required.
- Proactively seek competitor intelligence, track competitor/global pricing and provide analytical support to predict price changes.
- Help to facilitate the development of pricing systems and analytical tools, which ensure efficiency, product profitability and financial risk assessment.

- Provide assessment to leadership team of the impact of government pricing policies and the possible impact on Novartis.
- Guide Novartis input into industry-wide pricing policy and agreements.
- Maintain a positive relationship with the Department of Health.

What you will bring to the role:

- Healthcare Pricing Experience and qualifications in Economics, Science, Business or Politics.
- Ideally, post graduate studies in health economics, public policy, economics or MBA.
- Extensive experience in the pharmaceutical or healthcare industries.
- Proven ability to analyse complex issues and develop forecasting models, coupled with advanced excel skills.
- High degree of accuracy and organisational skills with attention to detail.
- Experience in the analysis and interpretation of data, including report writing, is essential.
- Ability to work collaboratively with a large group of stakeholders to achieve common goals.
- Ability to explain complicated pricing concepts to leadership and international audiences.
